This custom residence was designed to create a sense of true traditional Andalusian style architecture. The home sits upon a 29,816 square foot parcel, which is surrounded by natural vegetation and wildlife. Particular emphasis was placed on the indoor/outdoor relationship by creating over 2,000 square feet of interior entry courtyard surrounded by traditional balconies, wood burning fireplaces and French doors opening to the art gallery. The design was influenced by the homeowner's priceless art collection, which is reflected in the long axial hallways and termination points.

This home was designed for a local family in the historical “Village” section of Laguna Beach, California. Careful consideration was necessary in creating a design that fit below an ocean view plane from the neighboring home immediately behind and uphill from the site. The home had to fit below a 14’ maximum height, requiring a one story design. The architect designed the home to fit below the view plane and provide all the program elements necessary, while fitting the program into the maximum allowable lot.
